Dear Sirs- I have concerns regarding the proposed changes in mandatory urine testing for governmental employees. As you may know, there are millions of people in America that suffer from a recognized phobia called paruresis, or psychogenic micturation disorder. As a practicing vascular surgeon, I can assure you it is a real disability and does not imply a conscious refusal to urinate under public situations. The need for oral fluid, hair, or sweat testing in this situation should be available. Thank you, Danile Gonzalez, M.D.
